

S. Wida Rides Three Winners At Long Odds

Little Jockey Also Has Leg Up On Pair of Seconds at Fair Grounds Track

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 6.—Marie Miller made it her third straight victory in as many starts at the Fair Grounds track today by winning the fourth and feature event on the program, a handicap race at one mile. Tailor Maid beat her Ballet Dancer II for the place money. Duchess Lacey and Madge F. both of which were heavily backed, failed to finish in the money.

By winning the opening dash, Bunch Back, one of the first choices in the third race, and which has been close in his recent starts at the Southern course, carried off the honors with Trusty and Brimstone taking down second and third money.

In the fifth race, even of the twelve entered went to the barrier, with Rancher the choice, but he could do no better than finish second to Baigneur, who won by a head from the good odds of 3 to 1. Marchesa II was third.

S. Wida carried off the honors among the jockeys by bringing home the three winners and finishing the latter evening at the good odds of 3 to 1. Marchesa II was third.

The results: First race (three-year-olds and upward, claiming, purse $100, five furlongs)—Asa, 1 to 1, won; Bunch Back, 2 to 1, second; Trusty, 3 to 1, third.

Izzy, the Traction Magnate Lone Favorite Fails Backers On the Island

Starts a Dog Sled Service From City Hall to Harlem

By W. O. McGeehan

"Here is two dogs by the name Chulius and Chulia," said Izzy Kaplan as he came into the sporting department accompanied by two canines of no particular breed. "No, I was not putting them into the dog show, which it is at Madison's Square Gardens, this month. These dogs are not loafers and I am going into business with them. I am going into the traction business and I am commencing to start right away."

"I got the idea from a motionless picture about Alaska, which it showed the Eskimos riding home on sleds, which is pulled by dogs instead of electricals. Then I figured that this snow ought to last a couple months more anyhow, and there wouldn't be no competition from the streetcars. So I got it an option on these two dogs, because first I would start in a small way and I would only run one sled express from the City Hall to Harlem."

"I was down to see the Mayor about it, and first they told me that I couldn't see him on account he was busy in his office crying for the people. But I busted right into the place, because there is no place I couldn't bust into if it is a matter of business. So I explained the idea to the Mayor and he said it was a fine idea and that maybe if it should be a success he would run municipal dog sleds all winter and he would put everybody out of business."

"The Mayor was very pleasant about it because I know how to approach people in a nice way. Before I left he said to me, 'Izzy, a man could wallop his own chassack, remember that.' I told him that if I ever had it a chassack I would wallop it if I wanted to because it was a free country. He patted me on the back, and then he started to cry for the people again, and I went out on account I had to get the Kaplan Traction Company started while the snowing was good."

"Of course, I ain't never drove any dogs yet, but once I drove a drosky in Kovno and I traveled with the Cossacks a whole lot, sometimes with them and sometimes a couple hundred yards ahead of them while my wind would hold out. But a feller with my brains oughtn't to have no trouble driving a couple dogs, and I am always kind to dumb animals, which I am sure they would be the same to me."

"When I get started going, of course, I wouldn't be driving no dogs. I would be sitting in the office of the Kaplan Interburglar Dog Traction Company enjoying myself while Chulius and Chulia and the other dogs was making money while the snow falls. The only thing is that the incoming and outgoing taxes would eat up a lot of the profits, because that Large Bill Edwards is a hard egg, and if you wouldn't pay them he would come after them."

"I want to see Jackie Ruppertstein on account he has a lot of big, loafing St. Bernardstein dogs, which they would be fine for my traction business, because they are good dogs for the snow. You know about them dogs. When people is lost in the snow the St. Bernardsteins put a little barrel on the collar and they go out and save them. But what is the use of sending out a St. Bernardstein dog with a barrel of one-half of one per cent beer in it? That would only make it harder for the poor fellers to die in the snow. Prohibition has put the St. Bernardstein dogs on the bum."

"When I get the traction business running I would give you a chob as guard on one of the sleds, and Ring Lardneck he could be a driver, on account I think he would make a good man to handle the dogs. I would need a lot more dogs, of course, but I couldn't use none of those little loafers of dogs which they call the Bumeranian dogs, on account they don't do nothing but sit on a silk sofa cushion at the dog shows and get kissed by the women until a feller would almost wish that he was a Bumeranian pup instead he should be a business man with brains."

"Don't you go around hollering that there is too much snow, because I hope that the snow should keep falling until Chuly, on account it is good for the business. The Mayor is helping me out fine, because he ain't trying to get rid of no snow at all. I don't like poetry very much, but I told you that the feller who wrote 'Beautiful Snow' said it a mouthful, and he must have been thinking about the Kaplan Interburglar Traction Company when he wrote it, and I would give him a free pass over the lines. Or, anyhow, I would give him professional rates."

"When I get enough dogs I would extend the service to Brooklyn and they could cross over the ice, which I would ask the Mayor to get a lot of second hand ice cream freezing machines so we would keep the water cool so the ice would stay there."

"Well, I got to get along and get the business started because the sled is waiting outside, and I got to hustle, because there is still a few cars running and I still got it competition. Come on, Chulius. Come on, Chulia. The Harlem Express is starting right away. Move forward, because there is plenty of room up in front, and please have the correct change ready."

State Attorney General Tells House Committee "Red" Menace Is Real and Must Be Met Firmly at Once

From The Tribune's Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Attorney General Charles D. Newton of New York, appearing today before the House Judiciary Committee in connection with legislation, urged the necessity of a Federal statute to reach the radicals in the United States and to curb their activities.

Mr. Newton insisted that the menace of radicalism was real and must be met firmly and at once. He declared there were between 300,000 and 500,000 radicals in New York City alone, belonging to organizations which advocate the overthrow of the government, with almost a hundred headquarters, from which their activities are directed.

John D. Moore, New York, representing the Friends of Irish Freedom, appeared before the committee later in the day and took issue with this statement. He said that statistics showed that if Mr. Newton's estimate was correct one out of every six males in New York must be a radical. In his opinion such an assertion was ridiculous.

The other principal witness before the committee was Francis Fisher Kane, former United States District Attorney for the Southern District of New York, who resigned several weeks ago because of his opposition to the policy as to radicals of Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer and the Department of Justice.

Questions from members of the committee were answered by indicating that unusual care should be taken to frame a Federal bill which would not interfere in any way with the freedom of speech or of the press and will touch only radicals who are engaged in the overthrow of government by force and violence.

"In New York City," said Mr. Newton, "there are between 300,000 and 500,000 radicals, belonging to organizations which advocate the overthrow of the government. They maintain between seventy and eighty headquarters, which are known as these headquarters Socialists, Communists, and other radicals. Before October last every one of these headquarters was located with ease, but since then they have been moved and are not so readily discovered."

"There are thousands of radicals throughout the United States of a violent type who advocate the overthrow of the government and the establishment of a dictatorship, such as existed in Russia. They are well organized and are armed and are pledged to accomplish a press equally as radical and violent as are these thousands of thousands."

"I feel that if we had a Federal law it would be of great assistance to the Federal authorities, that cannot be easily apprehended by state, local and Federal judges could deal with the situation in a more comprehensive way. For instance, we cannot get witnesses or testimony from persons outside of New York while setting under the New York law while setting under the Federal law would be strengthened to prohibit the transmission of radical propaganda by mail or otherwise."

"Ridiculous," Kane Says
Mr. Kane told the committee that current reports that "conspiracies are on foot to capture the government by force" were "utterly ridiculous."

"Considering the size of the United States and the fact we are a nation of 100,000,000 persons," said Mr. Kane, "it seems to me there have been extremely few outbursts since the signing of the armistice."

"The people who have been arrested for deportation have not been armed, and practically no arms or explosives were found in their possession. There have been a few real bombing outrages, and the miscreants can be brought to justice under present laws. I cannot take the menace of Bolshevism seriously."
